The National Finances.

A large audience, including many of our leading business men, assembled in the hall of the House of Delegates in Richmond, Saturday evening, to hear Mr. James H. Platt's exposition of the finance bill recently introduced by him, and now perding before Con-

On motion of General Joseph R. Anderson, Hon. Robert L. Montague, of Middlesex, was called to the chair.

Mr. Montague presented to the meeting Hon. James H. Platt, member of Congress from the Norfolk district, who explained the purposes of the bill in question, and urgued that its passage would place the finances of the country in a safe and prosperous condition and afford that security and relief so much demanded by the commercial and manufacturing

General Joseph R. Anderson followed Mr. Platt in support of the National Exchequer bill, and in a speech of considerable length and great force, urged the importance of the scheme. He presented the following preamble and resolutions, which he had prepared for submission to a committee of the House. On motion of Mr. Counally, the same were a lopted, as follows:

"Whereas experience has demonstrated that the existing financial system in the United States is defective-among other things in this that from want of elasticity, or other cause, money is sometimes rendered so scarce and dear as to seriously embarrass the business and industries of the country; that this system furnishes an irredeemable. and, consequently, a fluctuating currency, for the uses of the people and that, while it employs a large number of national banks, it establishes no such concert of action between them, or predominant power and control in any of them, as is believed to be essential to prevent, ward off or quiet commercial or monetary panics.

And whereas the people of Virginia in common with the people of others of her sister States desire a more equitable distribution of the currency of the country; therefore, be it Resolved by the General Assembly of Virginia, That in the opinion of the General As: sembly no currency can be satisfactory to the people of this country, or place them on an footing with the people of the rest of the world, which is not redeemable in coin.

2 That in the opinion of this General Assembly the amount of such currency should not be rigidly fixed by law, but should be regulated by the wants of the business of the

3. That in the opinion of this General Assembly-assuming the power of Congress to establish banks to be settled by the practice of the government-it is expedient, at as early a day as practicable, to establish one controlling specie paying national bank (with branches in the several States,) which bank shall be the fiscal agent of the government; shall be in its organization and administration independent of political control; and shall have power to prevent, ward off and quiet such commercial or monetary panics as all business communities are liable to, by the accumulation of adequate cash reserves of coin and bullion; the use of the discounting power, and, when need be, the regulation of the rate of interest that it may charge.

4. That in the opinion of this General Assembly it is unwise to our government, unlike the other leading commercial nations, to hold its large balance of coin, amounting usually to near a hundred millions of dollars, locked up in the treasury and useless, while the people are struggling against a paoie that may be speedily quieted or prevented by its wise use. Witness the unparalleled crisis of September

That in the opinion of this General Assembly the bill now before the House of Representatives of the United States, entitled "A bill for the establishment of an Exchequer,' seems to embody substantially the foregoing principles, and is worthy of the careful consideration of Congress."

Extensive Frauds in Guano.

From the New York Observer. ] We published some time since an account of an analysis by the New York State Agricultural Society of various samples of guano sold under the name of Peruvian Guano, which had been largely adulterated. Legal proceedings were instituted against several persons and firms in this city, for making and selling such fraudulent mixtures. An investigation has been going on for some months. One of the accused confessed to having carried on the business of mixing genuine Peruvian guano with other substances for sale as guano for several years. It was put up in bags, barrels, and hogsheads, and marked as genuine Peruvian

With considerable difficulty the books of this dealer were produced and he was questioned concerning them." The amount of "mixed" sume sold during the year from June 1, 1871, to June 1, 1872, was about 547 tons. The defendant testified he was in the habit of selling to dealers in fertilizers in the South, and that he mixed guanos to order for other parties. An item on page 172 of journal under date of October, 1872, was: "Mose to cash, $245, for 70 loads No.

The article designated as "No. 1," was molders' saud, the same as founders use. He confessed that he bought it to make stuff to order; some of it was mixed with the senuine Peruvian guano Several other similar purchases of sand were acknowledged as having been made "to mix with Jarvis Island and then with Peruvian." He did not know where the sand was obtained from, but got it from cartmen. It appeared that nine-tenths of the purchasers of his guano were dealers, and that they all knew that the guano he sold them was adulterated, and that most or all of the New York dealers who bought of him sent to his factory for the mixed guano.

A law has been enacted in South Carolina that all commercial tertingers shall bear the name and address of the manufacturer or sell er, together with a true analysis of the article; that any failure to furnish the genuine article thus composed may be plead in defence to an action for its price, and that the State geologist shalt, when required make an analysis and painted in any colors desired. CHAS. W. GREEN, publish the result increof, etc. Such a law in some other States might prevent a great amount
